The Journeys End

To me God was just a story
Is said to be the God of glory found it difficult to understand
I could have the life that He had planned
How could it be that God could care for me
How could God so holy set a sinner free
Nothing I was told I could do to help
To remove the chain of sin
Just to ask and God's spirit will come in
And point the way to heaven's door

And so the door swings open wide, I step in
Not only to be set free from mortal sin
I became a chosen child of The King
Free to walk from darkness into glorious light
Each step I take for the Father
A member of the Heavenly family
To dwell forever ever with our Holy Saviour
Free from the past filled with His grace
Not looking back or remembering.

Jim's Jottings

The London Marathon is now history for another year. A few got their names in the headlines especially 1st, 2nd and 3rd through the tape. But most of the newsprint plus photographs were about the good Samaritan who noticed another runner about to collapse who (never mind the number of entrants time completion) saw the man, held him in his arms and stumbled with him over the finishing line. Good man! The fainting man would not have finished the race if the helper had solely considered his position number in the big race. A Christian, I don't know. But what an example for us all!

In these days may we be vigilant to observe someone who is about to collapse, physically, mentally or spiritually, do something for them practically, to help them towards and over the finishing line. Even at the cost of losing our own position in the race of life. Like Jesus would do and DID - observation and action.

Be blest!

Don't be passive—be passionate!

All this year God's been challenging me about getting passionate for him, thus the title of this year's Family Camp 2017. Over the last few months especially weeks we have had some amazing ministry through the doors of Hollybush. The message is clear, ...come on, lets get on with it...

Time spent in Northumberland at the end of the Easter holidays, brought me ever nearer to my wonderful Saviour. A trip to the Holy Island was necessary to buy another puffin (not real!). I had bought the original puffin on a previous visit, but it had lost it's beak as Mittens (the cat!!) had knocked it off! I was thrilled when I found another one just the same :-).

If anyone has been to the Holy Island before you will know you have to watch tide times otherwise the sea comes in and covers the road that you travel on to get there. There are photos to remind you of the devastation of becoming stranded and the sea is over the roof of the car...!! You have a certain time to visit the island, to drive on or drive off which is a fair mile or so. Checking my watch I knew it was time to get to the car and start our journey back before the tide came in. Watching the waters come in I started to put my foot down!! We made it back to the main land...with the Puffin...thank you, Lord...

The realistic side is we need to keep WATCH, WAKE UP, and WALK ON to what God has in store for us. There may be little time, but I feel God is urging us to pick up speed as it were, not slow down and wait for the tide to cover us and hide us but GET PASSIONATE for Him—Keep on, pressing on!
